"Everything happened the last night," said Skipper Strot, in response to eager inquiries for news of the trip. "We just bowled along wishing for more wind until last night, when things began to happen fast. Three times we had to call all hands on deck and get mighty busy. Shortly after 8 the main gaff carried away, and the same time to cleve the

and it took some time to get the wreckage, and fix a leg of mutton to workun der. Then as soon as we thought everything was snugged down, the square topsail sheets went out. To cap the climax, we then ran into the tail end of a nasty squall, which took our minds off other troubles. However, we're here, and glad to be back. I hope to have come in first, but it's
